This article will cover some basics about how to use Photoshop and its toolbar; on how to modify images without resizing; and lastly, how to navigate and communicate in Photoshop. RELATED: In this beginner's guide to Photoshop, you'll learn how to create your own Photoshop templates, create and edit photos, and alter images with various brushes. Photo editing for beginners Photo editing for beginners is a set of instructions on how to create a basic personal image. It's a series of steps that will help you make your own, one-off personal image. You will need: A blank canvas that is larger than a standard picture frame. A blank canvas that is larger than a standard picture frame. A subject that will provide your personal vision. that will provide your personal vision. Photoshop An adjustable template (see "Adjust your image template") Creating a personal image Using a blank canvas to compose the scene from scratch, you will need to pick a subject that you are passionate about and will provide your personal vision. Start with a basic grid. Use guides to help you stay organized and proportional. Place your subject in the center of the canvas. You can either use the grid tool to place it or use the rectangle selection tool to select the entire picture. Stay proportional (using guides) Use the guides and proportion tool to create a grid within the canvas. The guides can be placed manually or you can use the "Zoom to Drawing" option on the right side of your canvas tool to toggle between different guides. You will use this feature during the editing process to see how your image is going to look when cropped and scaled. Notice that there are more guides than horizontal lines. The use of guides is to keep the object in proportion with the rest of the canvas. For example, Photoshop makes it easy for you to see the photo and its center, left side, right side, top, bottom, and bottom-right corner. Setting the size and position of your subject You can crop by dragging with the rectangle selection tool. Right click to add guides. You can add guides to help you keep your subject in the center of the canvas. Move the guides by dragging them with your mouse. You can use the auto-fit button on the bottom of the image canvas to align your subject to the size of the canvas. After cropping, the

Q: XMLHTTPRequest responseCode:200 with https? I get an XMLHttpRequest: responseCode:200 with https+data+mimeType+url("application/xml; charset=utf-8"). This happens when I call XMLHttpRequest.send() (with send as a member of XMLHttpRequest) with a file:// source. It also happens when I copy the responseText from the request into an editor and write at the beginning of the text. I tested this with XHR requests to If I replace with it no longer works. If I understand the XMLHttpRequest docs correctly the response should only be available if the received response text starts with . So what is happening here? In my theory it has to do with http vs https. But that doesn't make sense to me. Windows 8.1 with Chrome 32. A: The important thing here is that the HTTP response to XHR requests is an HTTP response, and not an XML response. The XML request string that you get from the server just looks like XML. The response to your request will include HTTP headers that instruct the browser how to treat the response. Assuming that you are talking about a query to then you can check the network tools in your browser's developer tools to see that the http version of the request results in the expected HTTP response. The result of the XHR request is likely the same as the result of the query, and the browser treats the response the same way. If you request then the server does return an XML document. If you check the network tools for this request, you will see an HTTP request, and only the HTTP response. Effect of age on function and structure of isolated perfused rat heart. The effect of aging on structure and function of isolated perfused rat hearts was examined. Function was assessed by the coronary flow response to intracoronary injection of prostaglandin F2 alpha, and structure by the aortic flow response to intracoronary injection of both norepinephrine and isoproterenol, as well as by the surface area of the ventricular myocardial tissue.

click to enlarge File: The 6th District This year's rainiest U.S. congressional race in Tampa Bay could be a victory for conservation and wildlife.Tampa Democrat Kathy Castor is hoping to flip a district that currently leans Republican and overwhelmingly votes for Trump. Castor is campaigning on a pledge to protect the Everglades, and she's got a chance to do it.A new U.S. Census report shows that in 2016, 74 percent of Castor's Pinellas County district voted for Donald Trump and 22 percent for Hillary Clinton. That's the opposite of the national trend, where Clinton won Pinellas by nearly 60 percent over Trump.Voting for Trump has been linked to a greater support for hunting in the area. A recent Tampa Bay Times poll found that 69 percent of Republicans support a ban on the inhumane practice. A new voter guide showed last week that the Republicans running the state Senate and House are taking a stand for wildlife by supporting a bill to ban bile-ejecting dogs."Farmed turkeys are kept in tiny cages and injected with hormones and antibiotics. On Florida's 'killing fields' about 100,000 birds are loaded, driven 1 to 100 miles and killed with a knife to their throats," Tampa Bay Times reporter Dan Sweeney wrote in an op-ed on the issue. "The state even allows hunters to 'bag' the birds, so they can get a trophy to hang on the wall. It's never OK to inflict cruelty on animals."Castor is campaigning on a policy that's met with mixed reviews: Support for the EAA.She's gotten support from two U.S. senators, as well as U.S. Rep. Kathy Castor, who represents the West Palm Beach area. She's defending a 2015 vote to spend $12.5 million in public money on the Everglades Restoration Initiative, which critics have blasted as a boondoggle.Castor's opponent, incumbent U.S. Rep. Dennis Ross, R-Groveland, said in a statement that he looks forward to "working with all of my colleagues across the aisle to restore the Congress' sound oversight and funding as necessary to implement and maintain sustainable programs that are sound and will have long lasting impacts."The Congress is the latest campaign to suggest voters are ready for a fresh face in Congress. Earlier this year, U.
