The MINI has been used in various countries including the U.S., Canada, Japan, Korea, Mexico, and India (Aurora et al. [CR2]; Cheng and Chan [CR7]; Goodson et al. [CR13]; Huang et al. [CR16]; Kwon et al. [CR21]; Lee et al. [CR22]; Moos et al. [CR27]; Stewart et al. [CR36]; Torous et al. [CR40]; Valente et al. [CR42]; Van der Veen et al. [CR44]; Yoshikawa et al. [CR51]). In this study, the validity and reliability of the Mini-International Neuropsychiatric Interview (MINI), a widely used structured diagnostic instrument for DSM-III-R, DSM-IV and DSM-5 and ICD-10, was assessed in Korean adolescents using the original versions of the MINI in Korean (Park et al. [CR30]; Shin et al. [CR34]).

Methods {#Sec2} ===== Participants and procedures {#Sec3} ----- The current study was part of a larger research project on the validity and reliability of the MINI in Korean adolescents, which has been described in detail elsewhere (Park et al. [CR30]; Shin et al. [CR34]). In brief, the current study used the MINI to assess mental disorders in 2,718 adolescents who participated in a community-based health examination program. Of these 2,718 adolescents, 2,156 (81.6%) were 13 years of age (11th and 12th grade students) and 462 (18.4%) were 14 years of age (junior high school students). As a result of a process of psychological autopsy, the dead adolescents were excluded from this study. The study was conducted at the Department of Public Health and Community Medicine, Hallym University Sacred Heart Hospital from November 2015 to May 2017. In Korea, adolescents are not required to register at medical institutions. The adolescents were recruited from two high schools located in a city on the coast of South Korea. During the health examination, the adolescents completed the questionnaires used to assess mental disorders. After the completion of the questionnaires, they were given a MINI diagnostic interview. Finally, a third author (JS) observed all the completed interviews by 82157476af
